The Gila River Indian Community's input was heard during the Native American Finance Officers Association's 2018 NAFOA Fall Finance & Tribal Economies Conference in Santa Ana, New Mexico. The conference featured tribal finance, legal and energy experts at the two-day conference held at the Hyatt Regency Tama-ya Resort and Spa from Oct. 1-2. In addition to breakout sessions with GRIC-related speakers, the NAFOA Board of Directors presented its Lifetime Achievement Award to Gov. Stephen Roe Lewis during the 11th Annual Lifetime Achievement Awards Luncheon on Oct. 2.

Treasurer Robert Keller, General Counsel Linus Everling and Gila River Indian Community Utility Authority General Manager Leonard Gold were among the speakers on panels discussing finance and capital, financial management and economic development and planning.

Keller discussed Gila Crossing Community School's unique funding model at the "New Community Development Financing - Health Care Centers, Energy Projects, & Schools," session.

According to Keller, the Community focused on Gila

Crossing as their "pilot project" for the new school funding concept. "The concept was simple: we construct the school, we finance the construction, [Bureau of Indian Education, the Department of Interior] leases it back to us in a commercial lease," said Keller.

"I ACCEPT THIS AWARD ON BEHALF OF MY FAMILY... AND ON BEHALF OF ALL OF THE GILA RIVER INDIAN COMMUNITY."

In "The New Realities of Indian Health Care," Everling outlined data from Indian Health Services and the funding of Gila River Health Care facilities. Gold was on the "Renewable Energy: Unleashing Limitless Energy on Indian Country," panel and gave a presentation called "GRICUA's So-

"With all the things I do and have accomplished this far I hope that it motivates and inspires the youth to believe in themselves that they, too, can do anything they put their mind to," Garcia said. "So please come and support not only myself but all the other women who will be vying for Miss Indian Arizona."

The foam fest included a 1/2-mile elder walk, 5k non-competitive run and 1.5-mile family walk, which began with a sprinkle of foam at the starting line. As a reward for their hard-earned efforts, each participant was treated to a lite meal and given a swag bag, but that was not all.

Walking Badger said they added a couple of new attractions to the event from the previous year, which is a nice addition for those not participating in the

Behavioral Health Services organizes family activity with horses

Christopher Lomahquahu
Gila River Indian News

Families at the District 4 Ballpark connected with horses for an activity organized by Behavioral Health Services and an equine therapy organization. Community members petted, brushed and interacted with three horses on Sept. 18 to promote teambuilding, and a way to learn more about horses.

Hoofbeats with Heart, a 501 (c)(3) charity out of San Tan Valley, worked with Behavioral Health Services for the event and Behavioral Health Services Prevention & Education Specialist Lead Anna Pacheco said, "The focus is on connecting with the horses and through a family night activity."

Pacheco also said that they partner with Sacaton Elementary School District for a weekly class with the horses and families.

Hoofbeats with Heart works with many organizations to provide therapy for clients of all types. "I started the therapy center about 12 years ago, we focus with kids with disabilities, we also provide rides for any one," said Kelly Hullahen, founder of Hoofbeats with Heart.

The organization has been working with the Community for six years and does all types of equine related activities with the children, who may have a disability both mental and physical.

"We definitely connect with other people and other groups and departments," said Pacheco, "Activities like the family equine night are one small piece of the other things that we do for the Community."

Pacheco said this is one of several ways Behavioral Health reaches out to the Community by providing opportunities that strengthen the family unit while building an environment that promotes a sense of belonging.

In District 4, the children spent time with the horses and learned their names and their breeds.

The horses, Arrow, Pace and Charlie are "retired" from racing, trails and horse shows, and the children quickly developed a bond by communicating with the horses and brushing their manes.

The classes in Sacaton are once a week, with six families currently participating in the activity and they cover communication, overcoming obstacles and setting family goals.

"We're going to continue through the fall and spring," said Pacheco, "This one was just the first partnership with the Sacaton School District."

Throughout the year, BHS will be providing different activities based around social interactions with families, but also on an individual level with trainings on a variety of subjects related prevention initiatives, that build strong relationships and educate about mental health and awareness. Desert Vista runner sets new 5k school record in Casa Grande

Lee Nasewytewa finishes in the top ten at the Nike Desert Twilight XC Festival

Lee Nasewytewa competed against the top runners and teams from across the Southwest at the Nike Desert Twilight XC Festival held in Casa Grande. Aaron J. Tohtsoni/GRIN

Gila River Indian News

Community member Lee Nasewytewa, a senior at Desert Vista High School, had a top-10 finish at the Nike Desert Twilight XC Festival held in Casa Grande on Sept. 28. He ran in the Sole Sports Sweepstakes race, the most competitive race of the night, which featured the top runners and teams from across the Southwest.

He finished the race in 15:16 which set a new school record for a 5K race, this was the second time this season that he has broken a school record. Earlier this season at a 3-mile race in California, Nasewytewa set a school record with a time of 14:25.

"It was a great race," said Nasewytewa. "I loved the competition, everybody coming down from Colorado, New Mexico, Utah and Nevada. I ran [15:16] which is still good. I'm satisfied but me, personally, I feel like I could have executed that race better than I just did. I guess I just went out too fast but I'm still satisfied."

As a team, Desert Vista finished in sixth place with a team score of 217, three-points behind the top finisher from Arizona, Page High School. There was a total of 30 teams in the exclusive Sweepstakes race, which were hand-picked by the race committee to ensure top-notch competition.

El Paso Eastwood finished first place with 112 points, second was Niwot

High School (113), Durango High School (167), Air Academy High School (191) then Page and Desert Vista.

"We competed," said Desert Vista head coach

Chris Hanson after the meet. "I think we still have some in the tank and we're going to find it. I wouldn't use the word 'disappointed' but I wouldn't say elated, either. We had some good teams here from the southwest, obviously, a team from Texas who is nationally ranked. We toed the line with them but we didn't come out on top."

The state of Colorado also had a strong showing with Niwot, Durango and Air Academy all hailing from the Rocky Mountain state. The top two finishers, Valor Christian's Cole Sprout (14:33) and Niwot's Cruz Culpepper (14:43), were from Colorado and currently their times rank as the fastest in the nation for a 5K race.

Nasewytewa finished third among Arizona runners. Highland's Leo Daschbach finished fifth and Page's Bowen Martin finished eighth. Daschbach competes in Division I along with Nasewytewa.

"He set a school record and that's saying something," said Hanson of his top runner. "He's got more to go and more to give and he knows it. He's fit, we just got to sharpen our racing skills a bit. You either get worse or get better and we plan to do the latter. We're excited for Lee."

The meet serves as the Nike Cross Nationals (NXN) Pre-Southwest Regional meet and is an opportunity to race on the same course against elite competition while earning at-large points to qualify for Nike Cross Nationals. In roughly six weeks, most of the teams will be back for the regional meet.

Desert Vista is the four-time defending state champion and will have a break before their next meet on Oct. 20 in Walnut, Calif. at the Mt. SAC Invite.

"We have to focus on running as a team and work towards getting our spread down, the team aspect is way more important than the individual aspect," said Nasewytewa on his outlook for the rest of the season.

Something to be told or talked about

By Billy Allen

Traveling through our community, some might wonder about the traditional, historical villages. Traditions and culture change – so, it would depend which time period (the Hohokam, the Spanish, American or twenty years ago), that someone wants information about. Can you imagine what people may have said when the first O’otham rode a horse INTO the village? “That’s not traditional! Who do you think are?” But it sure beat walking. Native cultures have always accepted changes. Today we avoid famine, talk English, and ride in steel horses (with air on full blast). Many of us make a good living because the “guardians” of our himdag adapted to new and better way of doing things.

With that written, let’s examine where our ancestors settled according to historical documents. I was loaned a copy of From Hohokam to O’odham, The Protohistoric Occupation of the Middle Gila River Valley, and Central Arizona by E. Christian Wells and am sharing what I learned. “Traditional” villages moved up and down along the river in an effort to find better water sources, food and for protection. Village elders who were seldom questioned usually made the travel decisions. However, families were not bound to obey, and were free to move or stay. But many hands make light work and there is safety in numbers, so the entire village usually migrated.

Four major settlement areas in which our villages moved in our early history were identified: Sacaton, Sweetwater, Casa Blanca, and the Pima Butte (Aji) areas. In the Sacaton area, a village called Tusonimo or La Encarnación existed in the 1700s. However Apache raids may have forced people to move to Sweetwater and Casa Blanca for safety. A Piipaash village existed in the area from about 1840 but was abandoned by 1870. Then beginning in about the 1850s, American facilities being built here such as a stagecoach stop, trading post, a school, and an Indian Agent’s home in Sacaton drew people from many different places into the area. Sacaton became the commercial and administrative center we know today. (Makes me think of that great baseball movie: “If you build it, they will come.”)

The Sweetwater area had several large villages dated from the 1700s. More than one early Spanish explorer mentions a large village called Uturituc or corner in this area. In 1914, Charles Southworth was placed in charge of identifying early irrigation areas along the Gila River. Apaches, an O’otham who lived all his life in the Sweetwater area, told Mr. Southworth this village was called “hur-churl-jurk”. It meant a bare or open place by itself. In the early 1800s, Stotonick became the big village, as the result of O’otham tribal and military alliances dating from roughly 1697 to 1846. The alliance has been labeled as the Pima-Maricopa Confederation. Sweetwater village also appears in the 1800s and still exists.

The Casa Blanca area

is a large area near the center of our current reservation. The area also experienced population growth due to Apache raids. Villages were forced to relocate to the southern bank of the akimel as villages moved closer together. Sratuka (full, will be known as Wet-camp) moved to the south bank but still farmed their fields on the north bank. Prior to 1850, Casa Blanca was the commercial and administrative center. In the early 1900s, the name Va’aki appears and refers to the mound of dirt left from the remains of an ancient building in the district. Earlier documents labeled this area La Tierra Amon-tonada (Earth Piled Up). It was also known as Tubus Cabors (Jeved Kavuddk or Earth Hill).

In studying the Sacate (a Spanish term for good grass feed) area it shows a continuous area of occupation extending from Pima Butte to Sratuka. This area had an overlap of Piipaash and O’otham cultures. Early writings referred to Sacate as Sudaccson or Sutaquissón, a reference to the abundance of water in the area. Hueso Prado or Standing Bone was a Piipaash village located near the stagecoach stop of Maricopa Wells, west of Pima Butte or “M” mountain. In the 1870s, when water was being diverted upstream, the people moved. The people abandoned the village, moving to Gila Crossing, Sacate, Sacaton or Salt River. On behalf of all of us, the “guardians” of O’otham and Piipaash himdag were always seeking a better way of life.

It would be nice to begin a conversation with some of the elders you know and ask them about some of the villages names listed. It may trigger a memory of long ago. A couple of generations in the future, someone will ask where and what were the traditional villages on Gila River Indian Community. The answer may begin with, “Well, I remember a Baloney Town, Dog Town, and Beverly Hills...”

physical events. “Each year we are learning and adding to it and what we can offer to participants, so with next year it’s like ‘where do go with this?’” said Walking Badger on the potential of the event to grow with the inclusion of new attractions.

Like other health activities across the Community this one is taking on an identity of its own, which Walking Badger says offers opportunities for collaboration with other departments to promote health and wellness.

“It’s about doing things that encourage physical activity, which my goal is to get the family out and get them moving,” said Walking Badger. Some of those activities included dancing to waila music and Zumba, which was a new activity this year.

As with previous years the foam fest has a deeper purpose, one that goes beyond foam and glow, that promotes health and well-ness with the family.

The event offers a little bit of everything, which is the idea, Walking Badger wants to promote, that there are a number of ways individuals can get involved through each of the Health Initiative’s events.

As the foam fest neared the end of the evening, Gertie & the T.O. Boyz setup shop inside the Event Center, playing a variety of tunes to get the crowd shaking and baking to dance the night away. Outside on the lawn of the Event Center children played on several of the large inflatable jumpers that doubled as water slides.

For more adventurous individuals, there was a rocking climbing wall, mechanical bull rides or a the zip line.

If the temperature wasn’t cool enough by the evening, a snow slide was setup to turn the desert into a winter wonderland, as children literally chilled at the foam fest, and Frances James led glow Zumba dance session.

Walking Badger is looking for more activities for next year and how they can improve the event.

In the meantime, other events are scheduled to take place, which are the Women’s Prayer Run and elder

Gila River Police officer retires after 20 years in the Community

Aaron J. Tohtsoni
Gila River Indian News

In 1998, the Gila River Police Department was hiring 30 new police officers as they transitioned from under the Bureau of Indian Affairs. Joaquin Manuel, from Tucson, applied and came to Sacaton for one of the positions. 20 years later, the now-sergeant is retiring from the force.

But not leaving.

He is retiring but will be stepping into a reserve police officer role. His career was celebrated during a department retirement luncheon on Sept. 27.

Over the course of his career, Sgt. Manuel served in a variety of capacities starting as a patrol officer before serving as a detective, corporal and sergeant of patrol officers and school resource officers. He was a part of many specialty units including the gangs/community response team, crisis intervention team, special response team and special weapons and tactic team. He was also a field training officer.

He had been in a supervisor role for the last 10 years and had a passion for working with the Community youth, serving as head of the cadet program.

"It's been a great adventure," said Sgt. Manuel. "I owe this community everything. For them to entrust me to serve the Community for 20 years, to feel a part of the Community for so long, being able to call this place my home, really."

In the post of reserve officer, Manuel will still be commissioned to work out in the field but it's a volunteer basis of 16 hours a month.

"I'm looking forward to still being involved in the Community and continuing to bring awareness," said Joaquin, who has been a part of many youth initiatives like DARE among others.

During his retirement ceremony, Police Chief Kathleen Elliot thanked him for his service and commitment and joked that they weren't going to let him go and that is why he will be serving as a reserve officer.

Also, speaking at the event was Lt. Gov. Robert Stone and Manuel Johnson, intergovernmental liaison. District 4 councilwoman Monica Antone also said a few words, reminiscing about the "police building" that Manuel first came to when he applied, which was a house and touched on his commitment and sacrifice over the past two decades.

Longtime friend and fellow retiree, Wayne DeLowe provided a touching tribute to Manuel.

"I'm glad that you chose Gila River and became a Community member," said DeLowe, telling the audience how many people would ask which district Sgt. Manuel was from because his last name is a common name in the area. "Oh, he's from district 8. He got to know a lot of different people and he became like family to us and to the Community."

Lt. Gov. Robert Stone congratulates Manuel at his retirement luncheon on Sept. 27. Aaron J. Tohtsoni/GRIN

DeLowe fought back tears while discussing the 2005 homicide of his son and how Manuel and Sergeant Timothy Chavez were there for him through the difficult time and how much he appreciated it.

Another fellow retiree, Raymond Soto, let Manuel know that despite retiring he is not done working because the hard work starts at home, letting him know of the honey-do list that will be waiting for him at home that includes chores like vacuuming and laundry.

"He was always dedicated to this Community," said Soto. "Even though he is non-Native, you probably wouldn't even know that because he worked really hard and got involved in the Community. His special touch was with the youth of the Community."

In attendance with Sgt. Manuel was his wife, three sons, two brothers, a sister-in-law and his mother. They were thanked by everyone who spoke for allowing Manuel to serve on the police department, understanding the sacrifice it takes to be on the force for 20 years.

On, Tuesday, September 25th, the Assistant Secretary for Indian Affairs, Tara Sweeney announced the Blackwater Community School within the Gila River Indian Community will receive $30.1 million to construct a replacement school. Grandparents and elders visit Casa Blanca Community School

Casa Blanca Community School celebrated Native American Recognition Week during Sept. 17-20 and culminated in a day for grandparents and elders during the shortened week ahead of the Community-wide holiday.

The week-long celebration focused on connecting the students with not only their own culture but other Native American cultures.

"It was very successful," Priscilla Espinoza, community school liaison, said about the Native American recognition week. "We had a big turnout of grandparents. At Casa Blanca Community School, we have awesome teachers here. They are here for our students and they integrate their culture with our culture. Sometimes you hear the non-Native teachers speaking our language and that makes us feel so good. They are embracing our culture and I think that is so important."

The week started when the school invited the Tribal Education's Cultural Program and Ramona Farms to the school on Monday for lessons and demonstrations.

Anthony Gray, culture coordinator, provided the students with the history of the Akimel O'otham and Pee Posh. Jarrod Lewis, culture and language curriculum developer, demonstrated different dances and explained the importance and meanings of the dances. The students also joined in the dancing, celebrating their culture.

Tammy Hestia, assistant culture coordinator, taught the students about the land and plants that are a part of the Community's culture. She showed the students edible seeds from devil's claw and saguaro cacti. The students had an opportunity to taste the seeds.

Also presenting was Ramona Farms, who discussed a traditional diet with the students.

They discussed the different types of beans and seeds. They sent the students home with seeds to plant on their own.

On Tuesday, the school had a traveling museum display courtesy of the Heard Museum.

On display were the Tohono O'odham, the Navajo, the Hopi and two displays called Who Are the Apache and Remembering Our Indian School Days: The Boarding School Experience.

The displays came with photographs and artifacts for the students to observe and learn. They also provided books that discussed the history, governments and real-life stories from tribal members. The students were able to touch wool, a major supply for the Navajo Indians. Also, provided were Hopi masks and katsina dolls.

"The kids got to know that their teachers were Native," said Espinoza, who highlighted the teachers' tribes. "They didn't know and it was important to connect and let them know that we are different nations but we are one."

The fourth-grade classes researched different Native American tribes and created tri-fold bulletin boards on their respective tribes. The boards were displayed in the library and each grade had the opportunity to do a walk through and learn about the different tribes.

The final day of the week was dedicated to elders and the student's grandparents were invited to class for an activity and a lunch meal. Each class had their own activity from making a dream catcher, t-shirt painting, reading and beading.

"It was about honoring them," said Espinoza. "We want to honor our elders and provide those connections for the children."

The entertainment consisted of music trivia from the 80s, 90s, 00s, as well as a dance number by a group of sparkling clad ladies, who performed a round of hit songs by Tina Turner. Although there were no spirits being served during this occasion, the spirits of the individuals were high for some that have put in over 20 years of service to the Community.

HR Employee Development Manager Marsha Chischilly, said the employees were all deserving of recognition for what they brought to the Community.

Lt. Gov. Robert Stone provided the welcoming address to the employees and said he and Gov. Stephen Roe Lewis are honored to recognize the employees for their hard work.

GRIC has a large workforce said Stone, which requires teamwork and communication to provide an environment that reinforces the values of the Community, which means looking after each other and making sure employees are well taken care of.

"Congratulations to each and every one of you. Some of you are retiring, thank you for your service to our Community," said, Stone, "It's an investment of your time and your family to commit yourself to your job and what you have been able to do all these years."

ASU's AISSS hosts lecture on preserving cultural traditions

Christopher Lomahquahu
Gila River Indian News

Arizona State University's American Indian Student Support Services held a special presentation into the traditions of Native tribes across Arizona.

The lecture called "Kinship Responsibilities: Protecting a Way of Life," was given by husband and wife Royce Manuel, Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community, and Debbie Manuel, Navajo Nation, in downtown Phoenix on Sept. 21. They shared their perspectives on the passing their culture from one generation to the next.

They said it ultimately comes down to sharing the knowledge about those who came before us.

"There are many teachers, educators and historians, such as grandparents from Native communities, that have their own experiences," said Debbie.

Royce said for his community and the southern O'otham tribes, there is a threat of losing the language and traditions and that it is upon those individuals who have knowledge about how things were done in the past to serve as advocates for the preservation of the culture.

"We are so ingrained within [this] society around us, that the things we had a long time ago were lost and so what I try to do," is look at what our tribes did in the past.

He said gender plays an equally important role in how it is shared, because either the men or women performed certain duties vital to their position within O'otham society.

"A lot of people today don't recognize some of the things that we have and how men and women functioned within the society," said Royce.

One of these things is weaving, which according to Royce was an action performed by the men, when they made objects like the burden basket, sandals and other everyday items. The couple discussed the importance of learning traditional gender roles. Royce said, "Take for instance a little-known item like the flute, which you don't see much anymore, it's a man's instrument and it was used to play at the house where a girl that he liked lived."

Debbie and Royce Manuel give a lecture hosted by ASU in Downtown Phoenix on Sept. 21. Christopher Lomahquahu/GRIN

He spoke about the use of the term "Pima" and how that translates into "I don't know," which is one word he tries to get people away from using, because it is part of the misinformation of how to correctly identify the Akimel O'otham.

Royce advised the students that language can be an interesting subject, because there are various origins to how the spelling and pronunciation came about. He said, "as an individual and a member of your own tribe you have to look beyond what you see and see where the history is and how that came to be, so you don't get confused."

Debbie said coming in as a non-O'otham speaker there are things that you learn that either represent the singular or plural, but also in the way it is emphasized with extended vowels, for example when explaining how far something is in the distance.

Kinship responsibilities are also expressed in traditional games such as is toka and gins. Toka is played by females and gins by males. According to Royce, toka simulates the battles of male warriors, which was recreated through a game played by O'otham women. Gins is played by the men on a large board of sorts, made out of holes dug into the earth and participants positioned in the cardinal directions. Players toss sticks into the air and move tokens around the board like Hasbro's "Sorry" according to markings on the sticks.

The insightful presentation explained the importance of gender roles within O'otham society and how both the males and females work together to sustain the livelihood of the people and culture.

ORDINANCE GR-0-4-18

TITLE 20, CHAPTER. 2, HOMESITE

A copy of this Ordinance in its entirety is on file and available for review at all District Service Center coordinator's offices and the Community Council Secretary's Office.

The Homesite Ordinance is effective on October 1, 2018.

CHAPTER 2.

HOMESITE

20.201. Authority.

This chapter is adopted pursuant to Sections 1 (a) (9), (13), (19), and

Section 4 of Article XV and Section 2 of Article XVI of the Constitution and Bylaws of the Gila River Indian Community (1960).

A. Authority; Purpose; Intent. The Gila River Indian Community ("Community") has enacted this ordinance under its inherent legislative, adjudicative, and regulatory authority pursuant to the express delegation of authority by Congress under the Indian Reorganization Act (25 U.S.C. §§ 461 et seq.), which provides the Community the authority to organize and adopt the Gila River Indian Community Constitution and Bylaws (March 17, 1960) and to enact ordinances governing conduct within the exterior boundaries of the Gila River Indian Reservation ("Reservation") (25 U.S.C. §476). The Community enacts this ordinance to regulate certain activities within the Reservation in accordance with Montana v. United States, 450 U.S. 544 (1981). The Community finds that the activities regulated under this ordinance threaten or affect the political integrity, economic security or health and welfare of the Community, including activities of non-members where:

1. the non-members enter into consensual relationships with the Community via commercial dealings, contracts, leases, or other arrangements;

2. the conduct of a non-member threatens or affects the political integrity, economic security or health and welfare of the Community; and

3. the Community provides the privileges and benefits of Community services or other advantages of civilized society to non-members.

B. Findings. The Community Council finds that providing homesites on Reservation land has a direct effect on the health and welfare of the Community and its members and is an action taken pursuant to the inherent powers of the Community to exercise civil authority and to provide for the welfare of its members. The Community intends for this ordinance to govern the provision of homesites and residential leases on both Community and allotted trust land within the exterior boundaries of the Reservation. The Community Council further intends that this ordinance requires that Community members and non-Community members abide by this chapter and disclose all relevant information to the Community in the assignment of homesites.

C. Residential Leases. Any violation of this chapter is a violation of the residential lease; the lessee agrees not to use any part of the leased premises for any unlawful conduct or purposes and will comply with all applicable Federal Laws, including the Code of Federal Regulations and Community Code. The Bureau of Indian Affairs ("BIA") is responsible for the enforcement of approved residential leases on allotted land. The BIA administers oversight of residential leases on allotted land pursuant to the Code of Federal Regulations 25 CFR 162 "A copy of this ordinance in its entirety is on file and available for review at all District Service Center coordinator's offices and the Community Council Secretary's office."

RELEASE

PHOENIX INDIAN CENTER JOINS NATIONWIDE INITIATIVE TO GET OUT THE VOTE IN URBAN INDIAN COUNTRY
PHOENIX, ARIZ – The Phoenix Indian Center (PIC) announced today their Arizona participation in the first-ever national Urban American Indian voter engagement campaign through funding provided by the Wallace H. Coulter Foundation and distributed by the National Urban Indian Families Coalition (NUIFC). This initiative is aimed at increasing voter registration, engagement and increased turn out at the polls. The Phoenix Indian Center, a local nonprofit, has done this work previously and is one of 17 metropolitan-based American Indian organizations chosen to receive funding because of their effectiveness in serving and advocating for Native communities, in fact they have a 71-year old history of service to the community. "This announcement comes on the eve of National Voter Registration Day and that couldn't have happened at a more fortuitous time," Patricia Hibbeler, Chief Executive Officer of the Phoenix Indian Center said. "We have partnered with several organizations across the state to activate our respective base of volunteers, advancing democracy to the highest to engage active citizenship, focusing on a commitment to a strong society. Collectively, we have an unparalleled reach to increase voter engagement at all levels." In conjunction with National Voter Registration Day, Hibbeler is taking to social media and asking American Indian voters to take the pledge to vote. On-site voter registration will occur at several key sites throughout the Maricopa valley including the Phoenix Indian Medical Center, Arizona State University at Discovery Hall, Mesa Community College, Scottsdale Community College, Native Health and Native American Connections - which also shares co-owned, owner operated commercial space with the Phoenix Indian Center. The nationwide initiative is a nonpartisan effort designed to build capacity, develop a network of organizations across the country and engage American Indians and Alaska Natives as advocates for policies and issues that are important to Indian Country through voter engagement. "Our phase one goal is to get as many people registered to vote before the October 9th deadline," Hibbeler said. "The second phase will focus on voter education and getting people to the polls. Yes, we are ready to roll up our sleeves and get to work." For more information about the program or the Phoenix Indian Center visit www.phxindcenter.org.

Fall 2018. About the service: The Gila River Transit service is free for all, and operates a 'deviated, fixed route' service. Meaning the bus follows a fixed route, but will deviate up to ¼ of a mile from the route to pickup or drop-off pre-qualified, disabled passengers. Currently two routes are operating; the Sacaton Shuttle in District 3, and the West End Shuttle in Districts 6 and 7. Service is available weekdays from 8 am to approximately 4:30 pm. Each route operates one 20-passenger transit bus that is equipped with a ramp for easy access and uses a kneeling feature that lowers the front of the bus closer to the ground at the bus entry/exit door. The Gila River Transit service is contracted through the Arizona Department of Transportation (ADOT) with FTA 5311 Rural Transit Program funds, and with additional funds provided by Gila River Indian Community tribal funds. Gila River Indian Community ensures that the level and quality of transportation service is provided without regard to race, color, or national origin in accordance with Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and with the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 and Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973. For more information regarding our Title VII/ADA obligations or to file a complaint, please contact us at the address given below.
